

THE ORGANISATION THAT I SEE

*William Pegg, Director & Founder,
Synthesis Group Australia*

February 2017

"I see a world class consulting firm with a global presence and influence, with the capacity to help any leader in any nation. Culture, country, faith or creed is no restriction. It is the company sought after as the authority, voice and guide on developing commercial rapport with clients, colleagues, suppliers and collaborative partners for mutual benefit and gain.

I see a world that is hungry to reconnect with people - desperate to re-learn how to work together in a highly digitised and automated economy. I see a business that is a voice of hope - a proven authority covering multiple disciplines and varied industry verticals, showing how 'others-first' delivers greater commercial returns.

I see a company with many productised programs, JV partnerships and brand collaborations. The focus is clear. Empower leaders with the ability to overhaul how their organisation engages internal and external audiences, for greater impact and stronger commercial returns. The central theme is to equip leaders with the practical means for creating an enduring legacy through compassionate servant leadership.

To most, this organisation provides advice, structured guidance and strategy to the spectrum of leaders in business and government.

Behind the veil, what I really see is an organisation that empowers leaders of today and tomorrow to make greater, more meaningful impact in their sphere of influence. Why is that important? Leaders have the authority, commercial backing and public platform to make significant change. If we change their heart, we will literally change this world."